The Revelation of Jesus Christ — The Increase of His Government Through Divine Administration

The Revelation of Jesus Christ Explained — How His Established Throne Unfolds Progressive Light, Order, and Alignment

By Paul Timothy Wray

EN

The Revelation of Jesus Christ: Author

Carl Timothy Wray has spent over four decades studying, teaching, and writing on the Finished Work of Christ, the Throne of God, and the progressive unveiling of the Kingdom from Genesis to Revelation. With more than 300 published books and a growing global readership, his work focuses on harmonizing Scripture into one unified revelation — showing that Christ's reign is not postponed, but presently unfolding through divine order and life.

Rather than presenting isolated doctrines, Wray's teachings are built upon a comprehensive framework that integrates the Finished Work of Christ, the Throne of God, the Book of Revelation, and the Revelation of Jesus Christ as one cohesive administration of divine purpose. His writings are known for clarity, structural continuity, and a deep commitment to Scripture interpreted through spiritual maturity rather than speculation.

This book continues that multi-decade exploration, offering readers a stable, Scripture-anchored understanding of how Christ's government increases and how His reign unfolds progressively in both the Church and the earth.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not merely the announcement that Christ reigns — it is the unveiling of how His government increases through divine administration. Scripture declares that "of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end" (Isaiah 9:7). This book explores how the Throne of God governs progressively, how Christ's established authority unfolds through ordered light and alignment, and how the Book of Revelation reveals not chaos, but the administration of a Kingdom already secured by His finished work. By understanding the increase of His government, believers gain clarity about judgment, order, spiritual growth, and the unfolding purpose of divine authority.

Revelation of Jesus Christ: Introduction

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not a forecast of disorder, nor a countdown to catastrophe. It is the unveiling of a government already established and a reign already secured. When Scripture opens with the words, “The Revelation of Jesus Christ,” it is not introducing uncertainty — it is pulling back the curtain on authority.

Christ is not waiting to reign. He is not preparing to ascend. He is not negotiating for dominion. The Lamb has been seated. The Throne has been established. The keys of death and Hades are already in His hand. The victory is finished.

Yet if His reign is finished, why does Scripture speak of increase? Why does Isaiah  EN “of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end”? Why does the Book of Revelation unfold in progressive scenes of order emerging from upheaval, light breaking through mixture, and the Throne administering judgment and grace simultaneously?

The answer is simple, but profound:

A government can be established and still unfold progressively.

The finished work of Christ secured authority. But the Revelation of Jesus Christ unveils how that authority is administered, how light increases, how alignment grows, and how divine order is progressively revealed in creation and in the believer.

This is where many misunderstand the nature of the Kingdom. They assume that if Christ reigns, there should be no process. Or they assume that process implies incompleteness. But divine administration does not contradict a finished work. It expresses it.

The Throne of God is not a temporary measure. It is the center of divine order — the place from which life flows, judgment restores alignment, and peace increases. Administration is not evidence of delay; it is evidence of purpose.

In this book, we will explore:

- How Christ's reign is already established.
- Why His government increases.
- What divine administration means.
- How progressive light clarifies mixture.
- How judgment serves order.
- And how the Kingdom is being aligned from within outward.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not static. It is living. It is unfolding. It is increasing.

And as His government increases, so does clarity.

EN

As alignment increases, so does peace.

As alignment increases, so does peace.

The question is not whether Christ reigns.

The question is whether we understand how His reign unfolds.

This book is an invitation to see the increase — not as delay, but as divine design.

Chapter 1

The Revelation of Jesus Christ — A Government Already Established

Definition — The Throne Is Not Future, It Is Established

The Revelation of Jesus Christ begins with certainty, not suspense.

“The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him...” (Revelation 1:1)

The Greek word apokalypsis means unveiling — a pulling back of the curtain. It does not mean speculation. It does not mean guesswork. It does not mean a coded timeline waiting to be deciphered. It means disclosure.

And what is being disclosed?

A throne already occupied.

When John turns to see the voice that speaks with him, he does not see a struggling Messiah. He does not see a candidate campaigning for power. He does not see a for coronation. He sees One “in the midst,” clothed with authority, keys of death and Hades (Revelation 1:18).

The Lamb has already overcome.
The Son has already been seated.
The government has already been established.

The finished work of Christ settled authority. The Throne of God now administers that authority. The Book of Revelation does not announce a future victory; it unveils an existing reign.

Before we can understand increase, we must understand establishment.

The government of Christ is not emerging from weakness. It is unfolding from victory.

Revelation — Finished Does Not Mean Inactive

Many stumble here.

If the work is finished, they assume nothing further unfolds. If Christ reigns, they assume there should be no process. But this confusion comes from misunderstanding the difference between completion and administration.

A foundation can be complete and still support progressive construction.
A throne can be established and still govern unfolding order.

When Jesus declared, "It is finished," He did not say, "Nothing more will ever be revealed." He declared the legal completion of redemption. Authority was secured. Dominion was restored. The Lamb was worthy to open the scroll.

Revelation 5 does not show Christ striving to become worthy. It shows heaven recognizing that He already is.

The Throne of God is therefore not reactive — it is administrative. It does not scramble; it governs. It does not panic; it orders. It does not compete; it reigns.

This is why the Revelation of Jesus Christ must begin with stability. Before seals are opened, before trumpets sound, before bowls are poured, John sees a Throne set in heaven (Revelation 4:2).

The Throne precedes the unfolding.

Authority precedes administration.

Victory precedes increase.

And this is critical: the increase of His government does not imply weakness in its foundation. It reveals the steady expression of what has already been secured.

The Lamb reigns now.

The keys are already in His hand.

The Kingdom is not trying to win. It is expressing what has been won.

Declaration — We Do Not Serve a Future King

We do not serve a Messiah waiting for power.

We do not preach a gospel hoping for authority.

We do not anchor our faith in postponed dominion.

Christ reigns.

EN

is established.

HIS authority is secured.

His government is active.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not about making Him King.

It is about seeing Him as King.

And once we see the Throne as established, fear dissolves. Speculation quiets. Panic fades. Because government is already in place.

The Lamb is not anxious.

The Throne is not unstable.

The Kingdom is not uncertain.

It is established.

Call to Action — See the Throne Before the Unfolding

Before you attempt to interpret seals, judgments, or prophetic imagery, you must anchor your heart in this truth: the Throne is already set.

If you read Revelation without first seeing the established government of Christ, you will interpret process as chaos. But when you see the Throne, you understand that every unfolding scene is administered from authority already secured.

Let the Revelation of Jesus Christ begin where Scripture begins — not with beasts or battles, but with the One who stands in the midst, clothed in finished authority.

EN

e Throne.

See Him seated.

And from that vision, allow every unfolding chapter of Scripture to be interpreted through established reign.

Chapter 2

The Increase of His Government

Definition — Increase Does Not Mean Insecurity

“Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end...” (Isaiah 9:7)

If Christ’s reign is already established, what does Scripture mean when it speaks of increase?

Increase does not mean that His authority is incomplete. It does not suggest instability in the Throne. It does not imply that Christ is slowly becoming King. The government is already secured. The authority is already absolute.

Increase speaks to expression.

The sun does not become more powerful at dawn — it becomes more visible. The seed does not become more alive when it sprouts — its life becomes more expressed.

In the same way, the Revelation of Jesus Christ unveils not a growing authority, but a progressively manifested government.

The Kingdom is not trying to establish dominion. It is unfolding what has already EN shed.

Increase is the outward revelation of inward completion.

Revelation — Government That Expands Through Light

Throughout Scripture, divine government is linked to light.

“Arise, shine; for thy light is come...”

“The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.”

Light does not erupt all at once in its fullest brilliance. It increases. It advances. It removes shadow progressively.

So it is with the government of Christ.

His authority is settled. But the unveiling of that authority moves from glory to glory. The Book of Revelation does not describe a King gaining control — it reveals a Kingdom increasingly clarified.

This is why Revelation unfolds in stages:

- Seals reveal.
- Trumpets expose.
- Bowls complete cycles of correction.

Each movement is not the struggle of a weak ruler — it is the measured administration of an established Throne.

The increase of His government is the progressive ordering of creation under already secured.

EN

Peace increases as order increases.
Order increases as light increases.
Light increases as revelation increases.

The Throne is not reacting to chaos — it is progressively eliminating disorder.

Declaration — His Government Is Not Static

We do not serve a static Kingdom.

We serve a living government.

His reign moves.
His light advances.
His peace expands.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not a frozen portrait of a distant King. It is the unfolding display of divine administration in motion.

The Lamb who stands in the midst is not passive. He opens seals. He directs history. He governs from the Throne.

And as His government increases, clarity increases.

As clarity increases, confusion diminishes.

As confusion diminishes, peace expands.

This is not instability.

EN

order progressively expressed.

Call to Action — Participate in the Increase

The increase of His government is not merely cosmic — it is personal.

The Throne established in heaven seeks alignment within the believer.

Where His authority is acknowledged, increase begins.

Where His Word is received, light expands.

Where His Spirit governs, peace grows.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not simply information about a reigning King. It is an invitation to come under that reign — willingly, joyfully, progressively.

Let His government increase in your thoughts.

Let His order shape your decisions.

Let His light clarify your perception.

As the Kingdom aligns within, it manifests without.

The increase begins in the heart and radiates outward.

Chapter 3

Divine Administration — The Order of the Throne

Definition — The Throne Governs Through Order

“Immediately I was in the spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven...”

EN

1:2)

Before John sees seals opened or judgments released, he sees a Throne set. The position of the Throne is not accidental. It is foundational.

The Throne of God represents divine administration — the ordered expression of authority. It is not merely a symbol of power; it is the center of government. From the Throne flows the river of life. From the Throne proceed lightnings, voices, and judgments. From the Throne authority is not merely declared — it is administered.

Administration does not imply instability. It implies structure.

A kingdom without administration is chaos.

A reign without order is sentiment.

Authority without expression is unseen.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ unveils not only that Christ reigns, but how His reign is expressed through divine order.

The Throne governs.

The Throne aligns.

The Throne maintains the harmony of heaven and earth.

Revelation — Administration Is the Expression of a Finished Work

Some imagine that administration means something is lacking. But the opposite is true.

Administration exists because the foundation is secure.

When Christ declared, "It is finished," the legal victory was sealed. But the Throne expresses that victory through order. The Book of Revelation reveals cycles of unfolding not because the Kingdom is fragile, but because divine authority is methodical.

Seals are opened deliberately.

Trumpets sound in sequence.

Bowls are poured with intention.

Nothing is random. Nothing is reactionary. Everything flows from the Throne.

The river in Revelation 22 flows from the Throne because life must be distributed. Government and grace are not opposites — they flow together. Authority ensures that life reaches its intended destination.

Divine administration is not harsh control. It is measured alignment.

Judgment is not emotional retaliation. It is the correction of disorder.

When light exposes darkness, it is not aggression — it is clarity. When truth confronts mixture, it is not hostility — it is restoration of order.

The increase of His government requires administration, because increase requires structure.

Without administration, growth would collapse under its own expansion.

The Throne therefore does not merely reign — it governs wisely.

Declaration — The Kingdom Is Governed, Not

We do not serve a chaotic kingdom.

We serve a governed Kingdom.

The Lamb reigns with order.

The Throne operates with precision.

The River flows with intention.

Divine administration is not evidence of delay — it is evidence of wisdom.

Christ is not improvising history.

He is administering it.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ shows a King who governs deliberately, unfolding light at the proper time, exposing mixture in sequence, and aligning creation through measured authority.

This is not the instability of crisis.

It is the steadiness of government.

Call to Action — Come Under the Order of the Throne

If the Throne governs heaven and earth, it must also govern the believer.

Divine administration begins within.

Where Christ is allowed to order thought, chaos subsides.

Where truth governs perception, confusion dissolves.

Where the Spirit aligns the heart, peace increases.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not only about what unfolds globally. It is about what is ordered internally.

The Throne is not distant.

It is central.

And as we willingly come under the order of His government, we become participants in the increase of His Kingdom.

Let His authority shape your reasoning.

Let His truth clarify mixture.

Let His Spirit align what is misaligned.

The Kingdom grows where the Throne is welcomed.

Chapter 4

Progressive Light — From Partial Sight to Clear Distinction

Definition — Revelation Increases by Light

“The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.” (Proverbs 4:18)

If the Revelation of Jesus Christ unveils a government already established, and if that government increases through divine administration, then we must understand how that increase occurs.

It occurs through light.

Light does not overwhelm all at once. It advances. It clarifies. It exposes gradually. Dawn does not leap to noon in a single moment. It rises, driving back shadow steadily until clarity becomes unmistakable.

So it is with revelation.

The unveiling of Jesus Christ is progressive. Not because Christ is changing, but because perception is being aligned. Not because the Throne is unstable, but because understanding is being renewed.

Progressive light does not add truth to Christ. It removes distortion from us.

Revelation — Distinction Clarifies the Throne

Throughout Scripture, confusion is resolved through distinction.

Light separates from darkness.

Truth separates from mixture.

Spirit separates from flesh.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ brings distinction.

When John sees the Lamb in the midst of the candlesticks, clarity begins. When seals are opened, hidden things are revealed. When trumpets sound, what was concealed becomes visible.

Progressive light clarifies where mixture once blurred understanding.

Many struggle with Revelation because they attempt to interpret unfolding scenes without seeing the increase of light. They read judgment without recognizing they see exposure without perceiving purification.

But divine administration increases clarity intentionally.

The Throne governs through illumination.

As light increases:

- Misunderstanding diminishes.
- False images dissolve.
- Fear loses its hold.

The Lamb appearing in the midst is not merely a comforting image. It is a clarifying one. His presence exposes mixture. His authority centers the Throne in perception.

Progressive light does not condemn — it distinguishes.

And distinction brings peace.

Declaration — Light Is Increasing

We are not walking into deeper confusion.

We are walking into clearer sight.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not darkening history — it is illuminating it. As His government increases, so does discernment. As discernment increases, so does stability.

The Kingdom does not advance through obscurity.

It advances through clarity.

The Throne does not rule through secrecy.

It governs through revelation.

And as light increases, the believer is not destabilized — he is strengthened.

What once appeared chaotic becomes ordered.

What once seemed contradictory becomes unified.

What once felt distant becomes centered.

Light is increasing.

Call to Action — Walk in the Increasing Light

The increase of His government is inseparable from the increase of light within us.

Where we welcome illumination, clarity grows.

Where we resist distortion, peace expands.

Where we allow truth to distinguish, alignment deepens.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ calls us to walk in progressive understanding — not pridefully, not hastily, but steadily.

We do not force full noon at dawn.

We do not demand maturity before capacity.

We receive light as it increases.

Let the Spirit clarify mixture in your reasoning.

Let truth distinguish what is of life from what is of confusion.

Let the Throne center your perception.

EN

As light increases within, the Kingdom becomes clearer without.

The unveiling is progressive.

And the increase is steady.

Chapter 5

Judgment as the Establishment of Order

Definition — Judgment Is Government in Action

When many hear the word judgment, they imagine anger, retaliation, or final exclusion. But within the framework of divine administration, judgment must be understood as government in action.

The Throne does not only shine light — it governs. And when government encounters disorder, judgment is the response of authority restoring alignment.

Throughout the Book of Revelation, judgments proceed from the Throne. They are not chaotic eruptions of rage. They are measured expressions of divine order.

Seals are opened deliberately.
Trumpets sound sequentially.
Bowls are poured purposefully.

Judgment is not the loss of control.
It is the evidence of control.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ does not unveil a panicked ruler reacting emotionally. It reveals a King whose authority exposes disorder and corrects what resists alignment.

Judgment, therefore, is not the opposite of grace. It protects the flow of grace.

Revelation — Light Exposes to Restore Clarity

When light enters a darkened room, it does not attack the darkness — it reveals it. The darkness recedes because exposure removes concealment.

So it is with judgment.

As progressive light increases, what is misaligned becomes visible. Exposure precedes correction. Correction establishes order.

Divine administration does not ignore disorder. It addresses it.

The seals in Revelation expose hidden structures. The trumpets warn and awaken. The bowls bring matters to clarity. Each movement is purposeful — not arbitrary.

Judgment clarifies what belongs to life and what disrupts it.

Without judgment, disorder would continue unchecked. Without distinction, mixture would remain unchallenged. Without exposure, confusion would deepen.

The increase of His government requires the removal of what opposes alignment.

Judgment is not destruction for destruction's sake.

It is the enforcement of divine order.

And as order is established, peace increases.

EN

Revelation — Judgment Serves the Kingdom

We do not fear divine judgment.

We understand it.

Judgment does not threaten the Kingdom.

It strengthens it.

Judgment does not weaken peace.

It secures it.

The Throne governs wisely. And when light exposes mixture, it does so to protect what is true, to stabilize what is good, and to remove what distorts.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ shows judgment proceeding from authority already secured. It is not the effort of a struggling King. It is the measured response of an established government.

As disorder is addressed, alignment increases.

As alignment increases, peace expands.

Judgment, therefore, is not an interruption of the Kingdom's growth — it is part of its increase.

Call to Action — Welcome the Order of the Throne

If divine administration restores order universally, it must also restore order personally.

EN

It's light exposes mixture in our own thinking, it is not condemnation — it is clarity. Where truth confronts distortion, it is not rejection — it is correction.

The Throne governing heaven also governs the heart.

Allow His light to reveal.

Allow His truth to distinguish.

Allow His authority to align what is misaligned.

The increase of His government begins with personal order.

Judgment, rightly understood, is not something to flee. It is something that stabilizes.

As His government increases, so does peace.

And where the Throne is welcomed, order is established.

Chapter 6

Alignment Within — The Government Established in the Believer

Definition — The Throne Seeks Alignment, Not Distance

The Revelation of Jesus Christ does not end at the heavens.

It begins there — but it does not remain distant.

If the Throne is established, if His government increases, if divine administration

EN

ough progressive light and judgment establishes order, then one must be asked:

Where does this increase begin?

It begins within.

Christ does not merely govern history.

He governs hearts.

The Kingdom is not only cosmic — it is personal. The Throne that John saw in heaven seeks alignment in the believer. The government that increases outwardly must first be acknowledged inwardly.

“Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done, in earth, as it is in heaven.”

The prayer is not merely geographical.

It is relational.

The earth that must reflect heaven begins with the renewed mind.

Revelation — Internal Government Precedes External Manifestation

Throughout Scripture, God’s order always begins within before it manifests without.

Before Israel was governed as a nation, the Law was written.

Before the Church was sent outward, the Spirit was poured inward.

Before Revelation unfolds globally, John is “in the Spirit.”

The increase of His government is not imposed mechanically. It is received willingly.

The Throne governs through light. And when that light is welcomed internally, alignment begins.

Where Christ orders thought, confusion subsides.
Where truth governs perception, distortion fades.
Where the Spirit aligns desire, peace expands.

This is why progressive revelation matters. As light increases, capacity increases. As capacity increases, alignment deepens.

Divine administration is not merely an external ordering of events. It is the steady transformation of perception.

The Kingdom increases wherever Christ is allowed to reign without resistance.

And that reign is first acknowledged within the heart.

Declaration — His Government Is Within Us

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not only something we observe.

It is something we embody.

The Lamb stands in the midst — not only of candlesticks, but of consciousness. His authority is not abstract. It is experiential.

We are not spectators of a distant Kingdom.
We are participants in its increase.

His government grows where surrender is present.

EN

spands where alignment is welcomed.

His light increases where mixture is released.

The Throne is not threatened by resistance, but it does not bypass it either.
Alignment is invited.

And as we align internally, we become living expressions of divine administration.

The Kingdom grows from the inside outward.

Call to Action — Welcome the Increase Personally

The increase of His government is not something to debate — it is something to yield to.

Let the Throne govern your reasoning.
Let the Spirit order your affections.
Let light distinguish truth from distortion.

Alignment is not achieved by force. It is embraced through surrender.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ calls us beyond curiosity about prophecy and into participation in divine order.

As His government increases within us, peace stabilizes us. As peace stabilizes us, clarity strengthens us.

The Kingdom is not merely advancing around you.

It is advancing within you.

As the Throne is welcomed internally, its expression becomes visible externally.

Chapter 7

A Government Fully Aligned

Definition — Alignment Is the Goal of Increase

If the Revelation of Jesus Christ unveils a government already established...

If that government increases...

If divine administration unfolds progressively through light...

If judgment establishes order...

And if alignment begins within...

Then what is the goal?

Alignment.

Not endless correction.

Not perpetual exposure.

Not constant upheaval.

The increase of His government is not movement without destination. It is movement toward harmony.

Isaiah declares, "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end." Notice the connection: government and peace. Increase and peace rise together.

Peace is not the absence of authority.

Peace is the fruit of aligned authority.

EN

nt fully aligned is a realm where nothing resists the Throne, where light obstructed, where order is not enforced but embraced.

Alignment is not the elimination of government — it is the fulfillment of its purpose.

Revelation — Harmony Without Distortion

Throughout the Book of Revelation, every scene moves toward clarity.

The Lamb stands in the midst.

The Throne governs.

The River flows.

The nations are healed.

The imagery progresses from conflict toward restoration, from mixture toward distinction, from disorder toward harmony.

A fully aligned government is not oppressive. It is peaceful. It does not require constant correction because correction has accomplished its purpose.

When light has removed distortion, clarity stabilizes.

When truth has exposed mixture, purity strengthens.

When authority has aligned what was misaligned, peace remains.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ reveals not an endless cycle of crisis, but a steady movement toward order.

The Throne governs until harmony is expressed.

And harmony does not diminish authority — it displays it.

EN

Peace

Revelation — The Kingdom Moves Toward

We are not moving toward chaos.

We are moving toward clarity.

We are not moving toward endless resistance.

We are moving toward alignment.

The increase of His government is not escalation of conflict — it is the expansion of peace. The Lamb does not reign to perpetuate disorder. He reigns to bring all things into alignment with divine life.

His authority is not threatened by opposition.

His Throne is not shaken by resistance.

The government increases until peace stabilizes what was once unstable.

This is not idealism.

It is Scripture.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ unveils a King whose reign produces alignment.

Call to Action — Live in the Alignment Now

A government fully aligned is not merely future hope — it is present participation.

Where the Throne is welcomed, alignment begins now.

Where truth governs thought, harmony grows now.

Where light is embraced, peace expands now.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ invites us to embody the alignment we anticipate.

Do not wait for clarity — walk in it.
Do not wait for peace — yield to it.
Do not wait for order — receive it.

The increase of His government is not something we observe passively. It is something we reflect actively.

As His authority aligns our minds and hearts, we become living expressions of the Kingdom's peace.

The Throne is established.
The government increases.
Light clarifies.
Judgment restores order.
Alignment stabilizes peace.

And as alignment deepens, the Kingdom becomes visible.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ is not merely the unveiling of a reigning King.

It is the unveiling of a Kingdom moving toward harmony — steadily, wisely, purposefully.
